

The dominant momentum loss occurs via the scattering of the neutral bosonic ϕ excitations off random fields.

This is good news for the AdS/CMT approaches, which do not capture the Fermi surface of most of the charged carriers.